HERMAN LEWIS CAUGHT NAPPING BY INFANTRYMAN

(Special Star-Bulletin Correspondence)

SCHOFIELD BARRACKS, April 20.—Long lines of skirmishers were out Saturday afternoon in a last attempt to find Herman Lewis, the colored soldier charged with several robberies and holdups, who escaped from the guardhouse at Schofield Barracks last Tuesday night. Advancing with the greatest caution and rifles cocked, about forty yards apart, each man was ready at any instant for a hand-to-hand conflict with the desperado.

Private Elihu Nuby of Company L, 25th Infantry, walking along the edge of an irrigation ditch, about one-half mile south of the 25th Infantry cantonment, came across Lewis sound asleep. He signaled to Lieut. B. P. Lamb, who was nearer to him than anyone else. Lewis was covered with a poncho, and close at hand were a baseball bat and a dinner pail containing rice and two chopsticks. It took considerable prodding to arouse Lewis, and, gazing down the barrel of Lieut. Lamb's automatic, he felt no inclination to offer resistance. His hands were tied behind his head with a web belt and he was led to the blacksmith shop, where a heavy band was riveted to his ankle connected to a 78-pound axle bar with a heavy chain.

On his way back to the post Lewis talked freely about his escape and his experiences, but it was evident that he was telling very little that was the truth. Among other things he said that he had broken the shackles after making his escape. When his clothing was carefully searched a shackle key was found pinned inside his shirt, and yesterday the shackles were found unbroken a few yards from the place where he was captured. Lewis was wearing some L Company clothing which he claims to have taken from a clothes-line the night of his escape. He had with him a fine gold watch, an electric searchlight and a penknife, but no other weapon except the baseball bat. Lieut. Lamb was out with 13 men from L company, all of whom had volunteered to go with him in search of the bandit. Several other parties were making a search at the same time.

TRIP TO KILAUEA VOLCANO ONE OF WORLD WONDERS

great cauldrons, yet in the two pools below these boiling pots the water is as placid as a mill-pond. The secret of this remarkable phenomenon is that an underground passage carries the water past these two quiet pools into one larger pool below. The Hawaiian boys, who are apparently amphibious, have games of follow-the-leader, in which one of the stunts is to start from beneath the waterfall, swim down the stream, then through the several boiling pots and finally diving down, shoot through the subterranean passage and emerge in the lower pool. These pools are viewed from a trestle work which spans the ravine. On the way to the boiling pots one passes Rainbow Falls, which, when water is abundant, gives off so much spray that it is said to be a brilliant rainbow is produced. The water is so low now that only a small segment of the rainbow may be seen. A portion of the great pool into which the water falls is lined by stratified rocks which have the same formation as the famous Fingal's cave on the Scottish coast.

One of World's Best Trips

The volcano may be reached by an auto ride of 30 miles or a combined railroad and auto ride, the former of about 20 miles. Of the two, the auto trip is far the most pleasing. The first half of the journey is through cane fields, the road being flanked on each side by rows of ferns. When about half the journey is completed, the real picturesque part of the road begins. The ascent is gradual; the road is good, and this ride through wonders of luxuriant tropical vegetation is one of the most interesting that the world can afford. Mile after mile the machine sweeps along between rows of trees, many of which are overrun by tropical vines. Gigantic ferns, from 10 to 15 feet in height, are common and the jungle of trees and vines looks impenetrable, should one wander from the trails that intersect it.

A few sugar plantations are passed, but for several miles at the last stage of the journey the houses are few. Near the summit is the old Crater House, which is now unoccupied. Finally one nears the summit and sees the great cloud of steam and smoke which shows the location of the active cone of Halemaumau.

The auto dashes around a curve and one comes suddenly upon the picturesque buildings of the Volcano House, presided over by Demosthenes Lycurgus, an accomplished Greek, who knows the volcano intimately and who seems to take a keen personal interest in giving every tourist the very best facilities for seeing the crater in action. Like most tourists I had arranged my schedule so as to give only one afternoon and one night to the volcano, but when I reached the summit and saw what was to be seen, I regretted that I had not shortened several days to the volcano, especially as I found the hotel very comfortable and the meals unusually good. The Volcano House reminds one of a well-equipped hunting lodge. The billiard room is a great hall, with the rafters visible, and with a noble fireplace at one end.

Volcano Seen at Best

Directly in front of the Volcano House is the rim of the great Kilauea crater, which is nearly two miles wide and nearly eight miles in circumference. With two friends I descended the trail for 600 feet and walked clear across the crater to the active cone of Halemaumau. This is an experience which no visitor should miss, as he sees on this walk what he can never see if he confines his trips to the auto road. The floor of this immense crater is now covered with great fields of lava, which has cooled in many curious whorls. This lava is nearly black in color except on the trails, where it has been converted feet.

The trail is very clear, being indicated by lines of stones. Here and there arise jets of smoke which reveal the presence of fissures through which are forced clouds of strong, sulphurous smoke. The trail descends very rapidly at the start and one soon comes to the foot of the rocky side of the crater. This is a stupendous rocky cliff, which drops 600 feet sheer from the road in front of the hotel to the floor of the crater. The walk across the crater is a great experience. Here are masses of lava in every form; some apparently bulged up by powerful forces underneath and broken into many curious forms; others apparently cooled just as the lava was swirling around in liquid pools. Across the middle of the floor is a huge fissure about eight feet wide, which is spanned by a rustic bridge. This fissure is fully 25 feet deep and its walls are broken as though riven by some Titanic cataclysm. Soon after passing the bridge one sees at the right hand a big steam cone which gives off clouds of smoke. A little further and one begins to see the fissures in the lava beds from which steam constantly arises. Here one may insert postal cards and have their edges burned by the intense heat.

Soon we approach the cone of Halemaumau, which is marked by a great pillar of cloud that rises for hundreds of feet above the rim. By day one can get no clear view of the crater because of the dense clouds of stifling sulphurous smoke which smell exactly like a batch of cheap sulphur matches ignited under one's nose. This crater is 1500 feet across from rim to rim and about 1000 feet in depth. On the rim have been erected several stands

REV. EBERSOLE DELIVERS SERMON AT Y. P. LEAGUE

Sermons were held Sunday at the K. of P. hall by a large congregation of young men and women and led by the Rev. Akako Akana, whilst the Rev. A. A. Ebersole preached the sermon, the subject being "Eternal Life."

The members of the Young People's League are preparing to participate in a Kamehameha Day parade, June 11, mounted on horses, 125 strong. Next Friday evening at 7:30 Mr. King, leader of the choir, and the members, will meet at the Kiloahana hall for practice. On Saturday an entertainment will be given by the members of the league at the parish house of Central Union Church at 7:30 p. m. On May 17 the Sunday school convention will be held in the K. of P. hall and will be entertained by the Young People's League, which has a Sunday school and Bible class recently admitted into the Sunday school work.

CARLSMITH WOULD HAVE HILO BAND RETAINED

HILO, April 17.—Attorney Carl S. Carlsmith became quite sentimental in the course of his plea before the Board of Trade last Tuesday afternoon for the retention of the Hilo band. The county supervisors propose to cut the musicians entirely off the payroll. Speaking for Lorrin A. Thurston, who was unable to attend a brief was made by the board, and who, by the way, has demonstrated some ability himself as an orator on divers occasions, Attorney Carlsmith grasped the verbal cudgels and wielded them with masterful effect in the band boys' behalf.

His eloquence had its effect. He presented and caused the board to carry a motion requiring Secretary Devo to go to the supervisors with a request, couched in diplomatic complimentary language, that they endeavor to retain the musicians. By the resolution which it adopted the board approves heartily the economy measures of the supervisors in every other respect. It even favors cutting the band boys' salaries "to the bone," but regards with apprehension their absolute dismissal.

and there is a government observation house near by for the accommodation of an official who makes regular studies of the volcano.

At night the active cone of Halemaumau is seen at its best. You go down seven miles by the auto road and then taking a lantern make your way, behind the guide to the rim of the crater.

Words Fail to Describe

No words can give any adequate picture of that look over the rim into this pit of Tophet. You will do well to lie on your stomach and peer over the lip of the crater and watch this wonderful working of these subterranean forces. Clouds of smoke arise through which may be seen the dull glow of the lower fires. Finally a gust of wind sweeps aside these clouds and one catches a glimpse of the core of fire at the heart of the cone of "Old Faithful." It is fire-red and its edges may be seen bubbling with the intense heat. Soon it is again observed but across the crater on the rocky wall are a number of pits, each of which blazes with red hot fires, sending out a terrible glow that lights up this awful pit. Far down in the bed of the crater a mere pin point of fire appears. This spreads until a number of small fires are revealed. This is a cone through which the hidden fires are trying to burst. In a dozen places jets of steam and smoke show the presence of great activity.

Now the clouds once more sweep away and we catch the glow of these infernal fires in the central cone. A sudden wind brings up the sulphur-laden steam and one must cover nose and mouth or he will be partly asphyxiated. At times there are slides of rock which are indicated by the dull roar of the stones tumbling into the pit. At intervals one catches from these terrible depths the hiss of water on red-hot coals. This is caused by the fiery lava meeting the mist-laden clouds. It is an awful sound and impresses one more than an actual explosion. I have seen Vesuvius when the mountain was "working" but compared with this awful pit of Halemaumau it seems insignificant.

After looking down into this pit for an hour, we took our departure. A heavy mist was driving over the rim of the crater and it beat in our faces as the auto went careering over the road to the hotel.

Tips for Tourists

A few words of advice to the tourist may not be out of place here. In going to the volcano wear rather heavy clothes, take a sweater and a raincoat. You will need all these things. Wear old shoes, as the trails are hard and will spoil good shoes. Arrange, if possible, to spend two or three nights at the Volcano House, as this time will give you a chance to see the active pit in many phases. Don't fail to look through the guest-books which Mr. Lycurgus will show you. They abound in amazing comments on the volcano by many sightseers, some of whom devote whole pages to description, illustrated with maps. Mr. Lycurgus is a very intelligent Greek, whose brother was killed in the last Balkan war. His advice in regard to the best way to utilize your time will be found valuable.

In going to the volcano, be sure to engage your auto of Mr. Wright of the Volcano Stables, as the opposition company is not to be depended on, frequently sending out old machines which break down on the road. If you follow this advice, you will have a pleasurable trip to one of the

Fort Shafter Notes

(Special Star-Bulletin Correspondence)

FORT SHAFTER, April 20.—The young son of Lieut. Vernon A. Roller of the 2nd Infantry was operated on by Captain Schlusser at the department hospital on Saturday morning and at last reports was pronounced as progressing favorably. The operation performed was a major one and of a rare nature, being a deep incision back of the ear to remove diseased bone.

Mrs. Irving J. Phillipson of the 1st Infantry has returned to Schofield Barracks from the department hospital, where she has been a patient for about ten days.

The 1st Infantry now at Red Hill with one battalion at Alea, will engage in an extended problem on Wednesday under the personal observation of General Edwards, the brigade commander. The work on Wednesday will conclude the field work of the 1st for the present tour and the regiment will march on Thursday for its home station. It is presumed that the 25th Infantry will follow the 1st Infantry in field work but just what territory will be assigned to the 25th has not been announced.

A well-founded rumor has reached Shafter to the effect that Company I of the Engineers and the 2nd Infantry have been selected to receive the new model equipment for trial and report thereon.

Recent orders from the war department announce the detail on the general staff of Major George B. Duncan of the 9th Infantry. Major Duncan was for a time one of the field officers of the 2nd Infantry and served a brief tour in Hawaii in 1911. He did not join the regiment at Schofield Barracks but was on special duty at headquarters in Honolulu and went back to the states for the field officers' course at Fort Leavenworth and later was at the War College for a tour. While on that duty he was transferred to the 9th Infantry.

The garrison hop on Friday night was unusually well attended and was, in consequence, a very pleasant affair. About sixty dancers from the post and other garrisons were present. In addition a number of the officers from the camp of the 1st Infantry were in attendance and a fair sprinkling of civilian friends of the officers from Honolulu was observed.

Cornel and Mrs. French, Major and Mrs. Smith and Captain and Mrs. Malone were dinner hosts prior to the hop and the majority of the guests at these dinners attended the dance.

Private Dobolski, formerly of the 2nd Infantry, but lately of the quartermaster corps, has reenlisted in the regiment and for I company, his old assignment. Dobolski is a ball-player of reputation and played regularly with the Stars last season. He was on the bench in uniform in yesterday's game and will try for a position on the regimental nine.

NIGHT IN ROOFLAND WILL INTRODUCE THE LATEST TANGO STEPS

"Tango is the dance, for me," so the song says and from the reports of those selling tickets for "A Night in Roofland" practically everyone in Honolulu will dance the "tango" after the vaudeville performance tomorrow night. Nor will that popular dance be forgotten during this performance, for Miss Rose Herbert and Vernon Tenney will give an exhibition in the latest tango steps, as will Mr. Thode, who also will have charge of the ball room after 10 o'clock.

Those in charge of "A Night in Roofland" are anticipating only success, and they say that much of the credit for this success will be due to Ned Steel, who has been training the girls for the dancing. Steel made the Hui Nalu Polities of February a much-talked-of amateur performance and he has worked with a will for this entertainment.

Mrs. Carl du Roi will be at the Honolulu Music store tomorrow morning from 10 until 12 o'clock and will reserve tables for those who wish them. Anyone wishing refreshments during the evening must notify the management of the Young Hotel not later than tomorrow afternoon.
